

Mother's Club Field Trips Reveal

Food Values of Local Plants

The Mother's Club sponsored a second field trip Wednesday, exploring the beach near Cape Nome for edible plants.

Mrs. Philip Dexter again furnished the transportation with Mrs. Nagozruk and Mrs. Attatayuk identifying the plants by their Eskimo names and explaining the methods of use and preservation.

Mrs. Burand of the University of Alaska extension service explained the common names and the food values of each plant.

One poisonous plant was found—the false hellebore. There are very few poisonous plants in this area, so it is fairly easy to learn which ones not to use.

Other plants identified on the trip were:

Sea chickweed (eteeahahluk), a versatile plant, as it is used in "Eskimo ice cream" and also makes a good kraut;

The marsh marigold (tayah-sungwak), which is poisonous raw but quite edible when boiled;

Sea lovage (tuguyuk). Enough of this was found to bring home for storing for the winter;

Also wineberries, salmonberries or cloudberry (akpik; Eskimo potato (muhzut), Parry's wall-flower, tall cottongrass (etok).

Another trip is planned. Anyone interested in going should call Mrs. Philip Dexter at her home or Mrs. Burand and Main 83.

Those taking part in the trip were Mmes. Dexter, Attatayuk, Nagozruk, Bahnke, Amahsuk, Oxereok, Burand, Waterfield; and Molly Dexter.
